Splight	Splight Technologies is an international transmission system solutions company, that uses software and artificial intelligence to maximize the transfer capacity of existing utility infrastructure while maintaining a secure and reliable system. The most immediate barrier to the energy expansion underway in North America is the limited expansion capacity of the power grid. Both new customers and power generators are finding it increasingly difficult to connect to the grid quickly. And, although governments and utilities have begun to mobilize to expand transmission, the natural barriers, political reluctance to accept new transmission lines, worsening supply chain delays, siting and cost of new power lines, and long construction times assure the industry will be playing catch-up for at least a decade or two. Increasing the utilization of existing infrastructure assets is the most important short-term supply-side solution.	http://www.splight-ai.com	North America	Entrepreneurial
